Some English Press criticisms on Gounod's new sacred Trilogy "Mors et Vita." Produced at the Birmingham Festival, 1885
THE TIMES.

His new oratorio was deprived of the attraction which the presence of a world-famed artist gives to his work in the eyes of a hero-worshipping public. But even without the attraction the name of the author of "The Redemption" had drawn a vast audience eager to discover if in this new effort the strength and beauty of its predecessor remained undiminished. * * * It may be briefly recapitulated that the work consists of four parts—a short Prologue, a Requiem Mass, the "Last Judgment," and the "Celestial Jerusalem." In the Prologue which is sustained by the Chorus and baritone solo, the keynote, or rather one of the keynotes of the conception, that of Death, is struck in a Leitmotiv consisting in its original shape of a descending sequence of three major seconds (from C to G flat), and occurring to the words "Horrendum est incidere in manus Dei viventis." Its character is sufficiently defined by these words, although it afterwards takes various musical shapes, appearing inverted and otherwise modified. Its significance is Death itself, death not only of the body, but also of the unredeemed soul. There is, however, hope even in the regions of darkness and doom. A beautiful and suave theme, sounded frequently throughout the work, expresses the idea of justice tempered with mercy, and finally the happiness of the blessed. The two opposing forces of the design, "Mors" and "Vita," are thus musically well defined, and any one acquainted with Gounod's style may well imagine the skilful and varied account to which he has turned these melodic materials. * * * The "Lacrymosa dies illa" is, for example, a well-developed and effectively written piece, and the "Sanctus," consisting of a suave tenor Air with Chorus, is in Gounod's most characteristic manner; while the "Agnus Dei" (soprano, Solo and Chorus), is imbued with spontaneous melody of high order. * * * The orchestral movement inscribed "Tuba ad ultimum iudicium" is a splendid piece of graphic writing. * * * Even finer, and indeed, the most successful number of the score, is that entitled "Judez." It begins with a grand orchestral prelude, in which the coming of the Divine Judge is depicted by the Leitmotiv, indicating, as was said before, justice tempered with mercy. That theme in its broadest expansion is given out by the strings in unison with an almost overpowering effect, which loses none of its beauty by the fact that Meyerbeer invented it in "L'Africaine." * * * If less graphically bold than in the "Judgment" the music here is suited to the subject, and a harmonious close after so much that has been terrible and soul-stirring is attained.

STANDARD.

M. Gounod has this time been thoroughly in earnest in his endeavour to wed his muse to his purpose; and while endeavouring to brighten his score with the introduction, wherever practicable, of those broad expansive melodies which he, perhaps, better than his contemporaries knows so well how to write, he has not shrunk from investing the dread aspect of his subject with such semblance of terrors as lie within the resources of his art. * * * In the Quartet "Quid sum miser," the chief subject, allotted to the tenor in G minor, is repeated by the contralto on the dominant, and again in its original position by the soprano, the bass Solo then interrupts with the "A. tremede," which, after a somewhat stern opening, merges into a charming and passionate melody for all four voices, redolent of the master's happiest manner from first to last. The "Salva me" episode is both beautiful and poetical, the voice parts being admirably distributed, though a considerable tax is laid upon the powers of the soprano. * * * The verse "Sed signifer Sarcus Michael," sung by the soprano, to a delicate accompaniment of woodwind and violins, pulsating in triplets, while an occasional chord from the harp and the least suspicion of a touch on the cymbals gives color and accentuation to the music. This is another of M. Gounod's little triumphs. * * * Introduces, in the soprano part, the truly lovely theme which is entitled "The Motive of Happiness," whose "linked sweetness" extends to fifteen bars. No attempt is made to develop this, but in its concentrated form it is so fascinating that probably any alteration would be a disfigurement. * * * By way of Epilogue comes an interlude written for full orchestra, with the addition of a gong and the grand organ, the subject-matter being derived from the counter themes of Consolation and Joy, and Terror and Anguish. Thus an imposing and majestic as well as significant peroration is attained, and the chief division of the trilogy ends forcibly, as it began. * * * The exquisite and prolonged theme which first prefaces and afterwards accompanies the Chorus, "Sedentis in Shrono" is unquestionably the most inspired of the trilogy.

F. H. TORRINGTON

The subject of our sketch received his musical training as (atheist) Organist, Choirmaster, Pianist, &c., under James Fitzgerald, of Kidderminster (pupil of Dr. Corge, Bristol), under whom he was articled for four years. As Violinist he was a pupil of Geo. Hayward, of Birmingham. After a successful career in England he came to Canada, and was engaged in Montreal as organist of Great St. James Street Methodist Church, a post he held for twelve years. During this period he developed his musical talent, and worked hard to cultivate public taste for the best class of music. For a considerable portion of this time Mr. Torrington was bandmaster of the 48th Regiment, and as founder and director of various vocal and instrumental societies, he services as solo organist and violinist were in constant demand. His reputation brought him to the notice of Mr. Gilmore, and he was engaged by that gentleman to form a representative Canadian Orchestra to take part in the first great Peace Jubilee at Boston. During this visit Mr. Torrington was asked by Mr. Gilmore to take up his residence in Boston, and a short time afterwards was offered and accepted the position of organist and musical director at Kings Chapel, which position he left for the one he now holds at the Metropolitan Church, Toronto. During Mr. Torrington's residence in Boston he was engaged as teacher of the piano and organ at the New England Conservatory of Music. Solo organist at the Music Hall Concerts. One of the first violinists in the Harvard Symphony Orchestra. Solo organist at the Saturday afternoon organ concerts in Henry Ward Beecher's Church, Brooklyn, N.Y., concurrently with Messrs. S. P. Warren, Geo. W. Morgan and other eminent organists. His services as conductor of musical societies were in much demand in and around Boston, and in the last Great Jubilee, six societies of which Mr. Torrington was conductor, took part in connection with this event he was extensively engaged as conductor of the Mass rehearsal, preparatory to the great gathering of the twenty thousand voices which met together upon that occasion. During the period of his residence in Toronto his work speaks for itself, as in addition to the palpable improvement in church and choir music which he has effected, and the training of Pianists, Vocalists, Organists and Choir Masters now to be found occupying positions in Toronto and other Canadian Cities, he has produced with large chorus and orchestra, through the medium of the Toronto Philharmonic Society the following works of the Great Masters, many of them heard for the first time in Canada, and some for the first time on this side of the Atlantic.

MESSIAH
CREATION
LAY OF THE BELL
FRIDOLIN

STARAT MATER

MARCH AND CHORUS (Life of the Christ)

MOMENT VITA (In Preparation)

Mr. Torrington is also Conductor of the Hamilton Philharmonic Society and in that capacity has produced in Hamilton, Romberg's "Lay of the Bell," "The Messiah," "Elijah," "Hymn of Praise," "Naaman," "Rose of Sharon" and "Samson." And with the Toronto University Glee Club Mendelssohn's music of "Antigone" in the original Greek and Max Bruch's "Friedhof."

Electricity, in its various modifications (of Galvanism, Faradayism, Magnetism, &c.) according to the latest attainments in science for Therapeutic purposes, excels in diagnosing and treating obscure, obstinate and nervous diseases that resist drugs and other kinds of treatment.

We repudiate the old way of Electrical treatment giving "Shocks" and the use of Batteries, that merely give a powerful current, etc.

By our system of treatment, using the improved Family and Physicians Machine (patented by us), in giving baths and in various ways, we can treat patients either at our Institution or at their homes, soothing and invigorating the whole being in a marvelous way.

These facts are more fully confirmed by testimonials and references such as the Grip Publishing Co., Rev. G. M. Milligan, Dr. Castle and a host of others.

MESSRS. HEINTZMAN & CO.

Gentlemen,—Having had the opportunity of playing your Pianos for several years, both in public and in private, it becomes my duty to express my candid opinion about their superiority. Their excellence consists directly in the peculiar bell-like quality of the treble, which is seldom attained by other makers; and the roundness and richness of the middle and bass tones enable the Pianist to produce any desirable effect. The touch—light, yet of sufficient resistance—is perfect in every way. I can unhesitatingly say that the instruments, to my idea, unite all the requisite qualities of a first-class piano-forte.

APRIL, 1886.

Published during April, May, and June, 1886, at 14 Adelaide St. East, Toronto.

BY AUTHORITY OF THE TORONTO MUSICAL FESTIVAL ASSOCIATION.

INTRODUCTION.

A description of the circumstances which lead to the formation of the Toronto Musical Festival Association might, not inappropriately, be preceded by a resume of Toronto's progress in musical culture within the past decade. But although of marked interest, the details would be rather too extensive to be dealt with in these columns, although an appropriate and interesting feature in a Libretto.

The first step toward organizing the Toronto Musical Festival Association was the issue of a circular letter by Mr. F. H. Torrington, conductor of the Toronto Philharmonic Society, which, in effect, was as follows:

"Recognizing the musical advancement of the people of Ontario during the last ten years; and believing that the advancement can be still further assured by giving the musical portion of our people opportunities for coming together in large numbers, and rendering the works of the Great Masters. I have been agitating for some time past the holding in this city of a Musical Festival, similar to those held in the principal cities of Europe and America, notably the Birmingham, Worcester, Hereford, Gloucester, Leeds, Boston, Cincinnati, Worcester, Mass., and Buffalo Festivals. My efforts in this direction have received such encouragement that the success of a Festival, to be held next June, is, in my opinion, assured. It is proposed to have a large and influential committee to carry out the scheme. The immediate arrangements to be entrusted to a competent Executive Committee.

"THE FESTIVAL TO CONSIST OF THREE EVENING AND ONE MATINEE PERFORMANCES: two Oratorios and two Orchestral and Solo Concerts, to be held in the Mutual Street Skating Rink, capable of accommodating 4,500 people. The chorus of 1,000 voices, selected from our Societies and Church Choirs, to be supported by an efficient Orchestra, supplemented by our local talent and the most eminent solo vocalists available in America. A guarantee fund of five thousand dollars will have to be provided to cover expenses; but it may be reasonably expected that the returns from the four performances will amply meet the outlay."

Replies to Mr. Torrington's circular letter were so numerous and encouraging, that the feasibility of the scheme outlined was virtually and satisfactorily settled.

A meeting of those who in the initial steps had expressed their willingness to become subscribers to the Guarantee Fund, was called and largely attended by men representing the best elements of Toronto society. Harmony and the utmost enthusiasm prevailed. A proposition to increase the Guarantee Fund to $25,000 was unanimously agreed to. Mr. Torrington's programme, with some slight alterations of detail, was adopted. Committees were formed, and after several meetings for organization, Mr. Torrington was formally tendered, and accepted, the post of Conductor. Three suitable halls (St. Andrew's, St. Paul's, and Philharmonic) were engaged for drilling the Chorus in. Arrangements were made with the Public and Separate School authorities for the vocal participation of some 1,200 school children. These children to be instructed by an efficient corps of assistants.

A committee was delegated to select the best vocal and orchestral talent then available. This committee consisted of the following gentlemen:

The particulars, with biographical sketches of the artists, will appear in our next issue.

The Orchestra will consist of 50 players, to be drawn from the following sources: 25 from the University of Toronto, 10 from the University of Ottawa, 10 from the University of Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton and London. These will be supplemented by a powerful body of local talent, to be selected by the Executive Committee.

Our city possessing no regular concert hall with adequate seating capacity, the Association, after careful inspection, accepted an offer of the Mutual Street Rink, which, under the direction and plans of its architect, Mr. Mark Hall, and at an expense of about $2,000, will be so modified and completed as to form a very comfortable and attractive Music Hall for the Festival performance.

Appreciating the great benefits of the Festival to Toronto, artistically and commercially, our public spirited men have guaranteed financial success. It remains for the people to take advantage of the opportunity offered, and by their active cooperation assist in making Toronto's first Musical Festival a grand success, which shall excite the admiration of sister cities, and in its far reaching results become a legacy of pleasure and progress to future generations, in which each participant may take a just pride.

GENTLEMEN, Enclosed find my cheque for amount of your account rendered. It affords me great pleasure to say that we are thoroughly satisfied with the artistic skill you have displayed in blending the combinations of colours in the three dining rooms just completed.

On the occasion of the meeting of the "Indoor Decorative Artists" held at the Rossin House on Thursday evening last, I invited criticism of your work, and I know you will be gratified to learn that it was by all pronounced faultless.

You are at liberty to invite citizens to inspect the decorations in these rooms if it will be to your advantage to do so.

Yours very truly,

"THE QUEEN CITY."

Toronto has just celebrated her semi-centennial more explicitly, it is just fifty years since she was incorporated as a city. Toronto—Indian, "the harbour"—is situated on Lake Ontario, from which it is separated by a sandy bar or natural breakwater, known as "Hamil's island," forming a magnificent and well-sheltered bay. Says a local scribe: "Unlike Montreal and Quebec, the capital of English Canada owes little, except the security of its harbor and the excellent sanitary results from its graded terrace of site, to nature. The glory of its stately streets and countless spires belong to itself, and it is not enhanced by anything in its surroundings of lake, island and hills."

In all probability the tourist will make a more or less prolonged stay in Toronto. It will be advisable to do so, this city being a good centre from which to make a series of excursions, besides which, it is possessed of many internal attractions—not to say that it offers every accommodation that could be desired by the traveller. Keeping in mind the fact that Toronto is really only fifty years old, the visitor will be struck with amazement at its extent and solidity. Noble thoroughfares are everywhere lined with magnificent public buildings, palatial wholesale houses, banks, chambers, hotels, extensive stores, and all the evidences of wealth and enterprise. In every direction the streets are traversed by tram cars, whilst overhead is a vast network of telephone and telegraph wires, and busy men push hither and thither in a style peculiar to large commercial centres. Half-a dozen railway companies pour trading humanity and the world's produce into the heart of the city. The hundred thousand souls who form the population keep themselves informed of the world's doings by supporting over forty journals, some of the more prominent of which are worthy to rank with those of most cities double the size of Toronto. Innumerable spires testify to the manner in which the spiritual wants of Torontonians are cared for, and the streets of the city are as quiet and orderly on Sunday as those of London itself.

MESSRS. HEINTZMAN & Co

Gentlemen,—It gives me great pleasure to bear testimony in regard to your splendid pianos. During a short visit here I had an opportunity of trying your instruments, and I must say that I was most completely pleased with them. The tone in my opinion is simply grand, and with the new bridge the upper notes supercede anything I have heard for some time. The workmanship and finish I consider perfect; in fact, to sum up, I consider your piano equal to any that I have tried. Wishing you all the success you deserve, I remain,

Yours truly,

JOHN E. BLACKTON,
